Tassajara Jazz Man

by Michelle Prejean

MP: Where were you born and raised?

BJ: I was born in Hope Arkansas in 1924, and it's an unbelievable coincidence that that's where our president was born. Bill Clinton is from that little town. When I was there, it only had 5,000 people, and of all the coincidences, I never would've dreamed it, but my closest friend back those days was Virginia Cassidy. She was the same age as me, and we were in the same classes. I left in the tenth grade, and she turned out to be Virginia Kelly, the mother of the President. I was waiting till everything died down about the presidency because I knew everybody she ever knew had called her to say how proud they were that her son was the president, but she passed on. I had no idea she was that sick and it really drags me that I didn't call her and tell her how proud of her I was. Hope Arkansas is where I was born.

MP: What were your parents like?

BJ: My father passed on when I was eight years old. He was the parts manager at the Chevrolet place in Hope. So my mother raised me with my sister, whose five years younger, and my mother decided she had to go do all the work. She had to be my father and my mother, and she was really good at that. Because I lived back in the Depression, with no man in the family but me, I learned along about how tough it was for the woman to do everything, and I

Fire District considers benefits

by Mary Beth Bowman

It was business as usual at the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District's monthly board of directors meeting -- with a couple of exceptions.

New Board Director John Hewitt seconded, with a motion to adopt, resolution 94-2 that posthumously honors former Board member and Director Morden Buck for his service, dedication and commitment to the fire district and to the CV community. The board noted that it was Buck who led the movement to supply volunteers with protective firefighting clothing.

Another exception was the suspension of action on changing the district's employee retirement plan from Aetna to the Public Employees Retirement System Plan. The Board considered the change last month, but tabled it to the May 11 meeting. At that meeting, Captain Jeff Trapp indicated that the safety personnel are in favor of the PERS plan.

Valley observatory offers tours in June

The Monterey Institute for Research in Astronomy announces the first tours of the MIRA Astronomical Observatory for the 1994 season. A Free tour of the observatory (the Oliver Observing Station) located on Chews Ridge will be offered on Sunday afternoon, June 12 at 1:30 p.m. and 3:00 p.m.

The tours consist of a 30 minute orientation slide show followed by a tour of the observatory. The observatory is located in the Los Padres National Forest some 30 miles up Carmel Valley and 5,000 feet of elevation.

Reservations must be made since space is limited. To make a reservation and obtain a map and instructions, please call the MIRA office, 375-3220.

Founded in 1972, MIRA is one of very few independent observatories in the U.S. MIRA's 36-inch telescope, state-of-the-art instrumentation, and unusual observatory building combine to permit the rapid acquisition of high quality data. MIRA astronomers are engaged in a wide range of projects from the study of birth, life, and death of stars, to comets sweeping through the solar system.

BUDDY JONES

Nancy Lambert, chairman of the Cachagua Country Faire, spends a moment with her son Daryl watching the entertainment. This is one of the few breaks Nancy and her busy committee members were able to take during the day-long event.

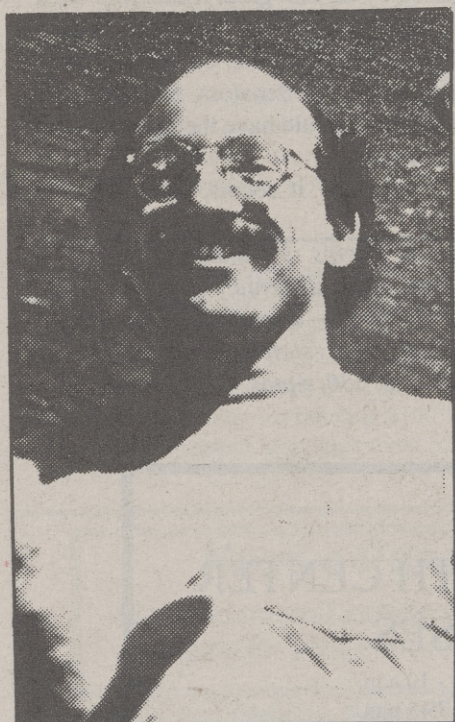

Three visitors bid a fond farewell to the Faire.

Cachagua Country Faire

Jeanne Mileti, publicity chairman for the Cachagua Faire applauds at the live entertainment.

Joel Manzer, is proud of the efforts by the Cachagua Park Board, of which he is a member.

Organizers rated the fifth annual Cachagua Country Faire as the best attended in the history of the event.

This year's faire at Cachagua Park featured day long entertainment and Russ Mock's famous Cachagua Fire Department tri-tip dinners.

Daytime children's activities and a variety of vendor booths surrounded the midway.

It was a gentle country family event with dancing in the evening and a huge silent auction.

Crowds relax and enjoy the music by the live band Homefire during the 5th Annual Cachagua Country Faire.

WHAT'S NEXT? BY MEL VERCOE

The possible resignation of our beleaguered President Clinton could be a step forward. President Gore might be willing to put more emphasis on just being President of the U.S., and a little less on being Emperor of the whole Planet Earth. Would President Gore be less likely, or more likely, to give in to pressure from war hawks, right-wing political and religious extremists, anti-communist paranoids, Pentagonese lobbying for wars to justify arms contracts, et al? If left up to President Gore, would the White House have been so interested in getting us to the point of direct involvement in Bosnia (bombing Serbs, for example), or threatening to land "heavily armed troops in Haiti" (to suppress a dictatorship, a turnaround from our usual effort to help dictatorships suppress natives in that part of the world)?

The ridiculous attempts by war hawks to "start something" against North Korea remind us that anti-communist paranoia is still alive and well within our not very well disguised secret government in Washington.

The average American just wouldn't believe how many mutual aid treaties exist between the U.S. and countries in parts of the planet where we have absolutely no national interest, but these treaties are really handy, when the arms business occasionally slows down. Perhaps President Gore can stir some interest in opening those issues to public debate. I hope he would insist on including the public in a forum on presidential powers, where a President (it used to be Congress) has the power to start a full-scale war, as long as he doesn't actually call it a war. Senator Dole, who knows first hand about wars, recently hit a new low by trying to force President Clinton to officially furnish U.S. weapons (lift the embargo) to even up the sides in a terribly stupid religious civil war in Bosnia.

Vice President Gore, who, like Dole, knows about war, would, I hope, try to keep America out of conflicts totally unrelated to America's own national security. It's unfortunate that President Clinton didn't get close enough to Vietnam to learn that wars can be more than just interesting pages in history books. In Bosnia country, where a Serb started World War One just by shooting an Austrian Archduke, we have only to light a fuse to get either Vietnam Two or World War Three going full blast.

We can't afford either one. We can't even afford to build enough prisons to keep the scum of our society out of circulation.

Without actually knowing a whole lot about Vice President Gore, I would guess that our nation's chances of still being around a couple hundred years from now would be a little better with Al Gore at the steering wheel, than with President Clinton and Madeline Albright twisting arms at the United Nations.

FROM WHERE I STAND BY LEE PHELPS

Hello, Suckers!

That's what you are. If you're among that group of ignorant voters who ignored ACTIV's warnings. In 1990, that proposition 112 was a scam. And that, far from being the "Ethics Reform" it was touted as being, what it really was meant to do was insulate California State legislators from Voter Wrath, when they enacted undeserved pay and benefit increases for themselves.

Well, guess what? The so-called California Citizens Compensation Commission hidden away in the fine print of proposition 112, about which I warned you, has turned out to be precisely what we predicted in 1990. Namely, a gang of political hacks who have only one agenda: currying favor with the elected officials whose salaries and benefits commission members decide upon . . . and having decided, are subject to neither review nor veto, nor even dismissal from their positions on the commission!

What has this stellar body of non-elected political cronies of elected officialdom just done? Well, on Friday, May 6, 1994, commission members decided to give state legislators the largest pay raise in our state's history. They hiked salaries of average legislators from $52,500 annually by almost 38% to $72,000 a year. That's $19,500 a year in just one huge greedy gulp. More important legislators (a self-anointed few), in what are known as majority and minority party Leadership positions, got more.

Democrat Senator Bill Lockyer and Assembly Speaker Willie Brown, Jr., were hiked to $86,400 a year; Republican Minority "Leaders" in the Senate (Ken Maddy, who authored the bill that gave us the utility tax) and the Assembly (Jim Brulte) will get $79,200 a year. So will lesser Democrats such as Senator Henry Mello and Assemblyman Tom Hannegan, majority leaders in each of their legislative houses.

Are any of them actually worth what they're already paid, let alone what they'll begin now to receive on January First? With our state facing the fourth straight year of multi-billion budget deficits, caused by all that great leadership we'll be paying for, I don't think so. What I think is that everyone of our 120 state legislators - 40 Senators, 80 Assembly members - should have their pay cut, not increased.

That's how it seems, from where I stand.

Carmel High School Seniors spend a sunny day at the Carmel Valley Community Center for their class picnic.

Not long are the days of being a student at Carmel High. Here seniors relax at the Carmel Valley Community Center for the annual class picnic.

Monte Carlo Night Revisited

Debbie Lemos was the top winner of the evening with over $37,000 worth of tokens. She chose, from 16 grand prizes, the Las Vegas trip for two including airfare.

As the last of the decorations from the twelfth annual Monte Carlo Night are being packed away for another year, the staff and board of the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center thanked those who contributed to and attended the best Monte Carlo ever.

Over 250 people enjoyed a first-class buffet and an evening of casino gaming, including Black Jack, Craps, Red Dog and Roulette. Congratulations go to the winners of the sixteen grand prizes.

Debbie Lemos took top honors with over 37,000 winning points, and took home an all-expense paid trip for two to the Las Vegas Sahara Hotel and Casino.

Executive Director Tim Doreck said that the Board of Directors extends their thanks to all who attended this year's event and to those who donated time, goods and services, and financial support. Without the commitment of community-minded supporters such as yourselves, there would be no Carmel Valley Community Youth Center.

think it's made me more sensitive to living with half the population of the world, which is women. These days, when being sensitive to their problems is important. But it was tough, we're talking Depression in rural Arkansas, and my father at Tuberculosis. In those days, that was a cruel disease that many people died from. My little sister now lives Hemet, CA, and I get to see her alot. Her husband, Grover Moore, was the Superintendent of Schools in Palm Springs for many years, and I'm real proud of my brother-in-law.

MP: When did you start playing music?

BJ: Well, when I was 18 months old, I stuck my hand in a lawnmower when no one was looking and cut a couple of fingers off. So my mother, again she was kind of a super mom, she started making me take piano lessons at the age of five, because she wanted me to use my fingers and for it to be as little a handicap as she thought it was. So for ten years, starting at age five, I had to practice the piano an hour before school and an hour after school. I used to be so made that she made me practice instead of play baseball or whatever I wanted to do, and then years later, when I became a musician, I was so glad she made me do that.

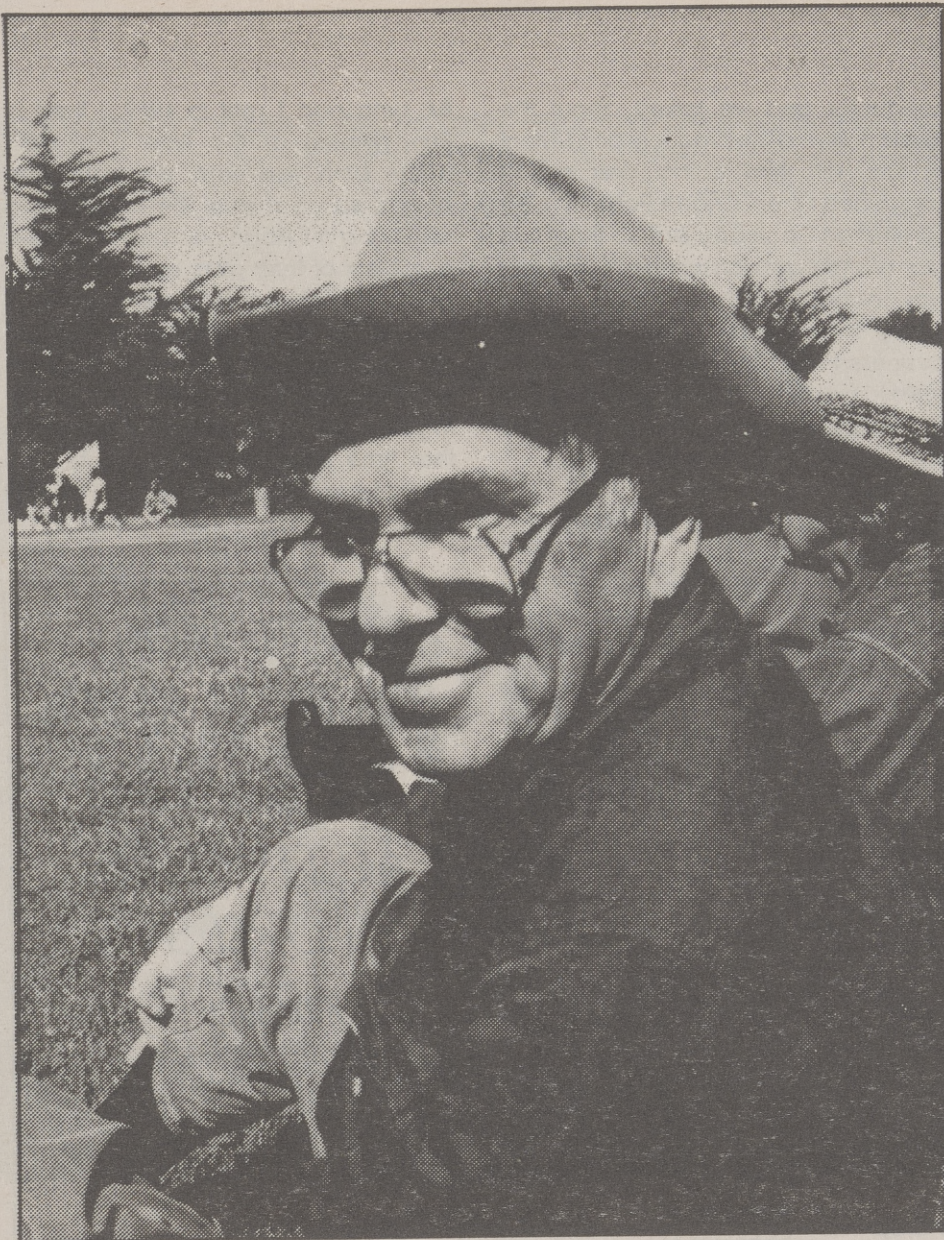

I don't know what to tell parents about how mean to be about making the kids practice, because it's a double edged sword. I'm so proud now that she made me do that, but I remember how I didn't like it at the time much.

MP: How did you get a start in music or what was your first musical job?

BJ: When I was 17 years old, my mother sent me to the University of Kansas City, which was the best big school close to Arkansas. It was there that I met Charlie Parker, later known as Charles "Yardbird" Parker. A true genius, and a great musician, he was 20 and I was 17. He like me enough to let me hang out with him and listen to that music. I said right then, probably the only free decision I ever made, "that's what I want to do, be able to play with those guys and play that music," and so ever since I was 17, I knew I was going to be a jazz musician, and it's nice to know what you're gonna do, you know?

Then World War II came along, and everyone had to go into that war. It was quite different from later wars. I went to the United States Navy School of music and when I got my draft notice, I thought I'd rather do that than be in the army, then I got into a Navy band.

We were shipped to Honolulu. I got alot of experience playing dances and marches for bands, so when I came out of the Navy, I started working with jazz musicians. I went back to Washington D.C. and Charlie Ventura was a famous saxophone player with a band there. His bass player broke his bass and left town to get it fixed so Charlie Ventura hired me because I was available. They put up with me for awhile, and I started learning to play with the good musicians which was a lucky break, and that was the beginning of it, I guess.

MP: Who are some of the other great musicians you've played with?

BJ: Well, because of my friendship and playing with Charlie Parker, when I went to New York in 1950, after the war was over, it opened a lot of doors for me. It really made it easy for me, and I started playing with different bands around town. Elliot Lawrence had the best band, he had Al Cohn and Zoot Simms, two famous musicians, and Phil Woods who is now a famous saxophone player. I got to play with Stan Getz, people know that name well, and later on, I was lucky enough to go on staff with CBS.

The three networks had their own staff musicians back in the '50. I played the Ed Sullivan show, and the Arthur Godfrey show. I was the bass player on those shows, and then when Frank Sinatra came to New York from the West Coast to do tours, his piano player Bill Miller would hire me and I got to play with Frank Sinatra whenever he was on the East Coast so I was really fortunate to play with real good musicians, and that makes you sound good and play good. I played with Henry James Orchestra and one of them was Tommy Dorsey's last band before he passed on. My favorite band was Count Basie and I was always going to see those guys and I never got to play in his band. That was my idea of the best.

MP: What kind of music do you like to play the most?

BJ: Well, I hate labels because it narrows you down. People think you're just for this certain category. I'm sure the word Jazz probably fits what I like the best, certainly rock and roll came later and it is out of my period. I tried to play it for awhile, but I went back to what I was raised on. So I guess, kind of old-time jazz, certainly the '40s and '50s was my big influential period, so I consider myself a jazz musician. I got labeled. It's a little different to be called a studio musician. Because I studied, my mother had made me do all the studying and practice, I was a good reader in New York I played behind all the famous singers. In the studios making records was what I did alot. I would have to say what I like to do is play good straight ahead old-time jazz. Duke Ellington, Count Basie, those are my big influences, and Art Tatum. Dizzy and Bird came along. I loved the be-bop period, another dirty work that I think is a label.

MP: When did you move to Carmel Valley?

BJ: I moved to Carmel Valley on Thanksgiving 1971. I had left New York and gone to Las Vegas for a couple of years. I thought that it might be fun and it just was not. It wasn't my style of a town at all. I came to visit some people out here at the Parrot Ranch on Thanksgiving of '71 and Lynn and I loved the neighborhood so much we just went back to Las Vegas and got our horse and all our furniture and came back here and have been here ever since.

MP: What would you say has been the highlight of your career, so far?

BJ: There's been a few highlights working with those good musicians I think was a big highlight and I've really been lucky and had a good life. There's just been lots of good times. One highlight was when Clint Eastwood made a movie about Bird, my old friend and hero, Clint hired me to go down and be a consultant on the movie. I spent four days in Hollywood making the movie. Clint was so nice. I spent a day with the young man Forest Whitaker, who played Bird. I talked to him for a day. I spent a day with Lenny Niehaus, the musical conductor and we talked about the music part and the producer and I spent a day with him going over sets. I introduced Chan, Charlie Parker's wife, I introduced Chan and Bird, so there was a lot of stuff I got consulted on, and that was exciting because being down where movies are made is not my business, I don't know about it, but you'd have to call that a highlight. To get to go to Hollywood and work with Clint Eastwood in the movies.

MP: When did you and Lynn meet?

BJ: Lynn and I met in 1969. I lived in Pennsylvania at the time and that's where Lynn was from. We both liked horses, so we met at the horse shows and hung out. Horse people kind of have a society of their own, so we decided (each for our own reasons) to go west and we came out together. We just got along together and we've been together ever since 1969, we've been together about 25 years, I guess. Since that time Lynn has studied flute and became a musician, whom I'm real proud of.

MP: What do you have planned for the future musically and otherwise?

BJ: I'm enjoying working locally around here. Sometimes they hire me at Los Laureles Lodge or in town at different hotels and I feel so comfortable when I get to play my bass a few times a week and work these jobs. We have this beautiful little spot up here on Tassajara Road that seems mighty nice. I can't imagine the future holding anything better than what I have right now, and I hope it just continues.

OUR ANIMAL FRIENDS

BY ARABY COLTON

The Mountain Lion

Because our friend the mountain lion is in the news - someone in Sacramento wants to repeal the sport-hunting ban - we reprint here a poem by D.H. Lawrence:

*Climbing through the January Snow, into the Lobo Canyon
Dark grow the spruce-trees, blue is the balsam, water sounds
still unfrozen, and the trail is evident.*

*Men!
Two Men!
Men!
The only animal in the world to fear!
They hesitate.
We hesitate.
They have a gun.
We have no gun.
Then we all advance to meet.*

*Two Mexicans, strangers, emerging out of the dark and snow
and inwardness of the Lobo Valley.
What are they doing here on this vanishing trail?*

*What is he carrying?
Something yellow.
A deer?*

*Que tiene, amigo?
Leon --*

*He smiles, foolishly, as if he were caught doing wrong.
And we smile, foolishly, as if we didn't know.
He is quite gentle and dark-faced.*

*It is a mountain lion,
A long, long slim cat, yellow like a lioness.
Dead.*

*He trapped her this morning, he says,
smiling foolishly.*

*Lift up her face.
Her round, bring face, bright as frost.
Her round, fine-fashioned head, with two dead ears;
And stripes in the brilliant frost of her face,
sharp, fine dark rays.
Dark, keen, fine rays in the brilliant frost of her face.
Beautiful dead eyes.*

Hermoso es!

*They go out towards the open.
We go on into the gloom of Lobo.*

*And above the trees I found her lair,
A hole in the blood-orange brilliant rocks that stick up like a little cave.
And bones, and twigs, and a perilous ascent.*

*So, she will never leap up that way again,
with the yellow flash of a mountain
lion's long shoot!
And her bright striped frost-face will never watch any more, out of the shadow of the cave in the blood-orange rock,
Above the trees of the Lobo dark valley-mouth*

*Instead, I look out.
And out to the dim of the desert, like a dream, never real;
To the snow of the Sangre de Cristo mountains, the ice of the mountains of Picoris,
And near across the opposite steep
of snow, green trees motionless standing in snow, like a Christmas toy.*

*And I think in this empty world there was room for me and a mountain lion.
And I think in the world beyond, how easily we might spare a million or two of humans.
And never miss them.
Yet what a gap in the world, the missing white frost-face of that slim yellow mountain lion!*

JOSEPH DE MARIA

Joseph De Maria, age 77, of Carmel Valley, died on May 13, 1994, of cancer at Community Hospital of Monterey Peninsula.

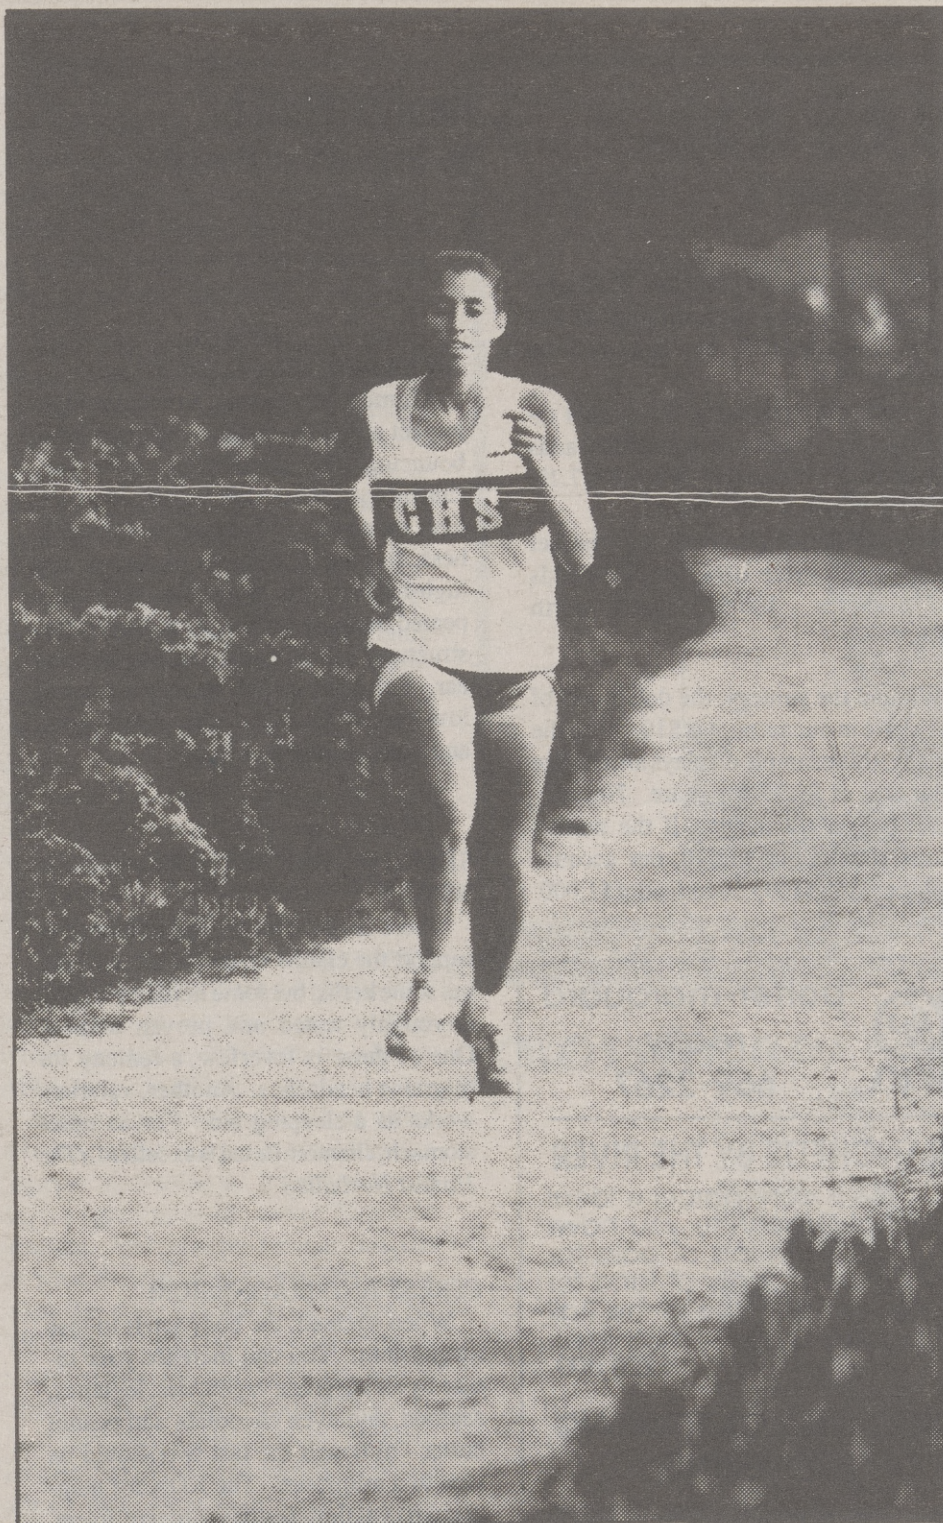

Born on February 25, 1917 in Polarmo, Italy, he had lived on the Peninsula for the past 73 years. Mr. De Maria was known by his friends as Pino and Pops by his kids; friends. He worked as a Masonry Contractor, as well as a band leader and musician. His band played for many years at the Officer's club and many local clubs. He also served in the Merchant Marines during World War II.

Mr. De Maria was a member of the Carmel Mission Church, Elks Lodge, Moose, The Pacific Grove Golf Bandits, Los Banos Duck Club, Bricklayers Union, Life member of the Musicians Union Paisano Club.

A graduate of Monterey High School in 1935, he was the Director of the Hi Ambassadors, the Student Band, and played lightweight football; he was a member of the California Scholarship Federation.

He is survived by two daughters, Diane Stein and Joele Swift, both of Carmel Valley; a son, Joseph De Maria of Carmel Valley, a brother, Angel De Maria of Carmel Valley, and a sister, Dolly White, of Monterey; 10 grand-children and 3 great-grand children. He was pre-deceased by his wife Sharlott, who died in 1992, a daughter Dathel who died in 1989, and a son who died in 1939.

Private services and burial were held at the Mission Memorial Park. The family suggests that memorial contributions be sent to the Carmel Valley Girls Softball League Support Fund, 103 Village Lane, Carmel Valley, CA 93924.

Cross Country champion for Carmel High School, Danielle Wall is a champion in the classroom, too. A teaching assistant in chemistry and physics, she is a National Merit Scholarship finalist. The 17-year-old senior plans to major in chemistry at Swarthmore College, PA. "I want to be a successful woman scientist," Wall said. She also plans to succeed on the college track team. Here she is on her way to winning a cross-country championship at Ribera Beach in October.

However, one person who is not a part of the "safety category" does not want to switch to PERS. Out of fairness to her, Board President George Hobbs suggested tabling the motion for further discussion in an executive meeting, thereby postponing a vote.

In other matters, the board voted to paint the exterior of the training building and to replace the phone system. They also voted to replace the 15-year old Self Contained Breathing Apparatus with new ones to include spare air cylinders. The district will purchase 24 new units and 24 spare cylinders, using funds already allocated by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. Four manufacturers are being considered in the bid process.

In January, the Board of Supervisors allocated $95,168 to the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District to be used in the purchase of SCBAs, as well as the purchase of an Emergency Facilities Generator (as part of disaster preparedness) and for an engine power train rebuild and upgrade. The Fire District Board voted in its May 11 meeting to commit these funds to the specific categories listed.

In other business, Fire Chief Bill Sims reported 47 calls were made in April. He also noted that he continues to act as a mediator in the issue of mobile water delivery to Hitchcock Canyon. Sims continued his report with an update on financing the purchase of a fire engine to replace the "first out" engine. Though the

The stock market is absolutely predictable. It will go up . . . and it will go down. Sounds silly, doesn't it? Watch. We'll buy shares in a growth mutual fund at $10 a share. If we invest $1,000, we own 100 shares. If the market goes up 10%, share value may rise to $11, and our 100 shares would be worth $1,100. If the market goes down 10% instead, share value may sink to $9, and human nature may scream within us to sell because we're losing.

If we remember that the stock market goes up and goes down, we would follow a buying strategy to apply this knowledge.

Now we invest the same amount, $1,000, in four installments of $250 each. At $10 a share, the initial purchase would add 25 shares to our account. If share value is up to 10% at our second purchase, $250 adds 22.727 shares and the resulting 47.727 shares is worth $525. Not bad, on $500 invested.

For our third purchase, the market returns the share value to $10 and $250 adds 25 shares: 72.727 shares worth $727.27. Not so good, on $750 invested.

For our fourth purchase, the market shrinks share value 10%, and $250 adds 27.778 shares: 100.505 shares worth $904.55.

Without the strategy, the dollar cost of each share in our account is $10. With the strategy, this example displays an average dollar cost of $9.95 per share. Not dramatic, but an advantage. If the market returns share value to $10, our account would be worth $1005.50 instead of $1,000.

TIDBITS AN EASIER PREGNANCY

Women who engage in regular high-impact aerobics, which involves a lot of bouncing, may damage their inner ears, causing symptoms such as persistent vertigo, dizziness, imbalance motion sickness, ringing or fullness in the ear and high-frequency hearing loss. Why? Repeated jumping is thought to loosen tiny structures called otoliths within the inner ear. Solution: switch to step classes or low-impact aerobics; wear good shoes, and train on resilient floors.

SELECT HERBAL REMEDIES WISELY

There is not always good evidence to support the claims made for some herbs, but some herbs, but some herbs have been thoroughly tested and proven helpful. One of these is feverfew, a remedy for migraine headaches. Another, valerian, works as a sleeping aid. For an upset stomach, chamomile tea is excellent. (The Honest Herbalist)

STRESS AND MAGNESIUM

When stressed, the body tends to lose magnesium. You can increase your intake by eating green vegetables, legumes, seafood, and even chocolate and peanut butter - although the last two should be kept to a minimum. The RDA for magnesium is 400mg per day. (Jackie Storm, M.A.)

A BETTER SEX LIFE

Researchers at the University of California found that as men's fitness levels improved, so did their sex lives. The exercisers reported having intercourse 30 percent more often and enjoying it more than a matched control group of sedentary men.

AN EASIER PREGNANCY

Researchers at the University of Illinois at Chicago found that women who kept up aerobic exercise during pregnancy were less troubled by backaches, headaches, hot flashes, shortness of breath, and fatigue than sedentary mothers-to-be.

CANCER WATCH

More than 150,000 American develop colon or rectal cancer each year. The warning signs are rectal bleeding, blood in the stool or a change in bowel habits. Tests for colorectal cancer: digital rectal exam, an annual physician's examination after age 40; fecal occult blood test: an annual lab analysis of a stool sample for signs of bleeding after 50; Sigmoidoscopy, an examination of the colon via a flexible viewing device. After 50, everyone should have this test once every three to five years. (American Health Magazine) current vehicle is still "reliable and useable, thanks to great maintenance and mechanics," Sims said, its parts are becoming obsolete.

One of the problems Sims said he is facing when talking to the manufacturers is the specifications the CV Fire District requires. Because of the sometimes limited street sizes and turnarounds, CV needs a fire engine a little shorter than the standard models, Sims explained. This makes "tagging on" to another district's similar bid rather difficult.

REAL ESTATE

BY RAND SMITH

When a house doesn't sell, there are usually three reasons given: (1) It's overpriced. (2) It's in poor condition (which implies it's overpriced). (3) The overall market condition is poor (in other words, it's overpriced).

These infer that the reason the property did not sell was beyond the control of the agent. As a matter of fact, these reasons directly accuse the seller as the culprit - the greed monger. Yet, when a property is sold, who takes all the credit? The real estate agent. "I Just Sold Your Neighbor's House," the mailing piece reads.

This is not only unfair, it's a distortion of the true process. Real estate is no different than any other commodity as a product in a marketplace. Any product can be sold for too much or too little based on either the buyer's or seller's lack of true knowledge. But in an open market, with both a knowledgeable seller and buyer, the price is established by the supply and demand; the sale is made by mutually informed principals.

The definition of "marketing" might be to expose the product to the greatest number of knowledgeable prospects in a given period of time, to find the most suitable buyer.

The truth is, only the seller can "sell" the property. The question is, can the seller effectively "market" the property? Is a particular buyer the "best" buyer for the property? How much time might we allot to find a better candidate, before we reach the law of decreasing returns? Where can we have the greatest impact to find the largest pool of qualified leads?

Today, as the real estate marketplace begins to shrink, the need for real estate marketing increases dramatically. The traditional methods of selling a home that worked only a few short years ago are no longer effective. Do they still work?

Of course. Record players still work, but they're no longer competitive. Open houses and flyers still expose properties, but not with the same impact. Why? Because a couple of years ago, the whole world was searching for property and buying.

Today, the world is for sale. A 3 bedroom Carmel house on a quiet street used to compete with comparable homes in the neighborhood. Now, that same house competes with Pacific Grove, Prunedale, maybe even Oregon. The choices are immense.

Therefore, the "net" that must be cast to find the potential buyers must be bigger. Much bigger.

So where are the buyers? They're either in the market already, or they're not in the market yet. If they're not in the market yet, they're either getting ready to get in the market, or they're not ready yet.

Simple.

Now, which among these is most likely to buy today? Most buyers that are currently in the market have already seen some houses. That means they've already spoken to one or more real estate agents. That means that very likely, some real estate agent is looking for property with, or for them.

If the most qualified buyer is driving around town in another real estate agent's car, an effective marketing campaign would be to try and convince that agent to turn into your driveway. Once they're in your driveway, that other agent should be schooled on how to show your property, so they showing is done professionally.

If they're in the market, and not working with an agent, then they are scanning the ads, or looking at signs. Good advertisement should welcome them in, not immediately try and close them. An ad that allows for further information, perhaps in several other languages, is more likely to attract serious buyers than the hyperbole ad claiming this property to be the best deal of the 20th century. Nobody likes being insulted or patronized.

If a buyer is getting ready to get in the market, they either have a house to sell, a relocation to complete, or a need or desire for more information on what or where they can afford.

If they have a house to sell, an effective marketing campaign would have a "system" on trading up. It's not enough to say it's a great trade-up market. That's too abstract. Many people need an analysis of what the longer term benefits are, or what the potential downside might be. Those sellers who have already committed to trading up need to target (and be targeted to) prospective properties.

If they have a relocation to complete, an effective marketing campaign would attract them from their source. When moving to another city, it's exciting to see what you can buy. It's like mail-order shopping. Because those buyers probably have houses to sell, an effective campaign would aim towards their agents, where the loyalty is already established.

If the buyers are seeking more information, an effective marketing campaign would be educational. It would have some method of converting renters into buyers. It would essentially be creating a new market share. While the buyers groomed on this program today may not be ready to buy your property, yesterday's "graduates" certainly would be.

Finally, wherever they come from, the buyer must judge your property. You are going to have to make the serious decisions on pricing. The fact is, even if you don't have to sell, you have to do what the people who have to sell do, otherwise, it won't be selected. In truth, if the property is over priced, it really isn't even on the market.

An effective marketing campaign stresses the importance and urgency of this fact in the beginning, not at the end. After all, when the buyer IS found, only you can sell it, and you deserve the credit.
